In recognition of the 50th Anniversary of the Town of Appomattox, Inc., the Appomattox Junior Woman's Club sponsored a "town seal" contest during last year's festival. Of the nine entries submitted, the Town Council officially adopted the above seal. The town seal adopted by Council was designed by Mrs. Emily Burke Daughtery of Belle Haven. Milky Disease Spore To Be Spread In County

Beginning next week representatives of the Virginia Department of Agriculture will begin spreading milky disease spore throughout the county, J. A. Smith, Extension Agent, reported. This material is an odorless powder containing the living spores of the organism which produces the milky disease of the grubs of the Japanese Beetle; the spores are obtained from the blood of the diseases grubs of the Japanese Beetle. This is a non-chemical method of controlling Japanese Beetle.

Smith said that this treatment requires several years to become established. The spore powder will not injure other animals such as cattle, birds or earthworms.

There will be no charge for the use of this material. Smith asked that land-owners cooperate with representatives of the Virginia Department of Agriculture when they knock asking for permission to apply the powder on pastures. About 50 sites have been selected for establishing colonies of this organism.

Religious Broadcasting Not Threatened

The following is a reprint from the October 21, 1976 issue of THE RELIGIOUS HERALD) We feel that readers will be most interested in the contents.

RELIGIOUS BROADCASTING NOT THREATENED

"Letters continue to pour into the office of the Federal Communications Commission protesting a non - existent threat to religious broadcasting A spokesman for the FCC has told the Department of Social Ministries of the Virginia Baptist General Board that the Commission would never eliminate religious broadcasting, nor could it, since to do so would violate rights, guaranteed by the First Amendment to the U. S. Constitution.

False information about a supposed threat continues to circulate among churches across the nation, including some in Virginia. The petition that began the furor(RM 2493) was denied on August 1, 1975 and that ended the matter, according to the FCC spokesman.

That petition was instigated by two California broadcasters who asked for the denial of licenses to radio stations owned by religious organizations and broadcasting their "sectarian" programs. According to the petition, they believed that the airwaves belong to the people and therefore a station should not be allowed to concentrate its emphasis on any sectarian doctrine.

In the confusion that followed public awareness of the petition, many people apparently linked it with the earlier campaign of Madalyn Murray O'Hair in which she requested censure of the broadcast from space of Scripture reading by an astronaut. That idea led to false conclusions, such as, that the petition, if granted, would eliminate all religious broadcasting including sunday morning services. Mrs. O'Hair had no part at all in the petition.

The Federal Communications Commission received 700,000 communications on the petition before it was denied more than a year ago. The total has now reached 4 million. The FCC spokesman emphasized that denial of the petition was made because of rights guaranteed by the First Amendment, and not because of the correspondence."

Coming November 6
Directory Assistance Charging

Here's why, and how it will work...

- Soaring Directory Assistance calls for listings readily available in the telephone directory are costing Continental Telephone Company thousands of dollars a year...and that eventually works its way back to the customer. Charging for Directory Assistance is intended to help control these volumes and thereby control expenses.
- Beginning November 6 Continental will charge 10¢ for each call to Directory Assistance in excess of an allowance of six (6) calls per main telephone line per billing period.
- Charging will not occur until after the sixth call. This will help recover some of the cost of providing the service from those customers who use it the most.
- The Directory Assistance operator will provide a maximum of two phone numbers on each call. The charge will apply only to calls within the state of Virginia and if the local calling area extends into another state jurisdiction.
- The handicapped will not be charged for Directory Assistance calls, and there will be no charge for Directory Assistance calls from hotels, motels, hospitals and coin phones, or out-of-state long distance Directory Assistance calls.
